

Executive Summary: Jobs 1001

Presented to Community News Executive Management

What was Jobs 1001:

Jobs 1001 was the nation's biggest ever community-inspired employment drive. Employers and jobseekers in five states became part of this landmark campaign calling on companies and businesses throughout Australia to recruit 1001 workers within 90 days. Jobs 1001 was created by the News Community Media Group, comprising Leader Newspapers in Melbourne, NewsLocal in Sydney, Quest Community Newspapers in South-East Queensland, Messenger Community News in Adelaide and the Community Newspaper Group in Perth. The groups partnered with three community employment agencies to fill the jobs.

Jobs 1001 sought out companies and job seekers throughout Australia to come together to help achieve the campaign's national target of creating 1001 jobs across Australia. From individuals looking for work to companies or businesses wanting to fill vacancies, this national employment drive has now become part of history.

The aim of Jobs 1001 was to:

- Reduce unemployment
- Create opportunities for jobseekers
- Encourage firms to employ more people

The campaign met the targets:

The campaign not only met but far exceeded the targets almost doubling the number of jobs created. By the last week of the campaign, over 1908 jobs had been created and the flow on effects had led to further job connects between employees and employers well beyond the 90 day campaign period.

The campaign proved that business and industry with the help of community partners can produce outstanding results, however the assistance of government innovation funding could assist to bolster the initial programs further with a view to assisting the programs to become self sustainable into the foreseeable future.

Opportunities:

We see future opportunities:

- Expand use of social media, have a dedicated 'Twitter & Facebook' page
- Expand relationships with large corporates

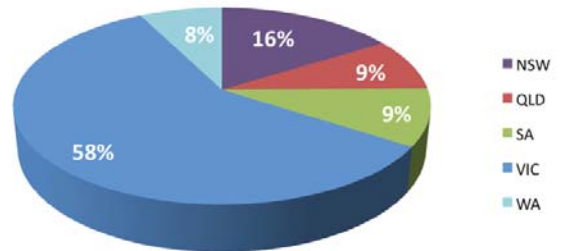

Some of the highlights included:

- The variety of companies which joined the campaign. It was not just the large companies such as Toll and Nissan who got on board, but small owner operated businesses also had great success in getting connected with motivated Australians looking for work.
- Active interest and participation by the Prime Minister. Ms Gillard was on hand for the announcement and praised Toll for its contribution and congratulated News Limited's community newspapers on the success of the campaign. "The great news about this campaign, which was kicked off a while back, is that its already exceeding its target" she said. "The original aim was to create 1001 new jobs in 101 days. We're a third of the way in and already the target is being exceeded.
- It raised the status of skills in Australia to support Government agencies and the peak skills body in Australia, Skills Australia who produced a report called pathways to prosperity in 2010.

What was the coverage and participation by state?

Of the 1908 Jobs created, the chart below shows where the job opportunities came from.
